St. Paul's Cathedral—South Aisle. This aisle, like the north, has many memorials to eminent men in Church and State. Here, "in streaming London's central roar," Nelson, the "Mighty Seaman," and Wellington, the "Iron Duke," were laid, with other naval and military heroes to bear them company, and in their vicinity are found the names of Reynolds and Turner and many others of imperishable fame. Sir Christopher Wren was also buried here: "Reader, if you seek his monument, look around."
